Warmer winters bring exotic visitor to Suffolk

Trevor Edwards' latest slice of Wash Farm Wildlife

HE WINTER MONTHS were highlighted by daily _ sightings of a grey heron, which took up residence for many weeks at Wash Farm. If not standing knee-deep in the pond waiting for fish, it would perch for ages on the stable roof, or stand for hours in the adjoining wheat field.

The grey heron is not a fussy eater and will eat almost anything associated with the world of water. And much more sometimes, as one was caught on camera in Norfolk spearing a stoat, though this must go down as a rare dish: a combination of a very lucky photographer and a very unlucky stoat.

More often favouring small fish, it is happy nevertheless to add frogs or even moles to its daily menu. A mole working too near the surface is just what the heron wants as it betrays its whereabouts with a wriggle in the soil. The humble earthworm is 80 per cent protein and so, not surprisingly, makes a Hoopoe, our delicious snack for many things along the food-chain. moles as well as gulls and buzzards. This is very nutritious fare indeed.

In comparison, farm stock is fed on rations of 20 per cent and our daily bread is made from wheat of 13 per cent protein.

REG WOODARD, THE TREE-

climbing nest recorder, recalls climbing high to ring three young herons and how great care was required to pass them down to ground level from height in muslin bags on a long rope. They were scrawnv ' and skeletal. all huge legs and beaks and not much else, and each chick was a real handful before being successfully ringed. Later though, when returned to the high platform nest, each was very happy to continue scoffing its fish larder as though Reg wasn't there

> OUR RECENT WARM December, which also gave the Alpine skiing

world a very green Christmas, gave way to a frosty mid-January before becoming very mild again. The weekend of 23rd Jan was a full moon and very warm for the time of year and, accompanied by a robin calling in the garden hedge, my late-night dog walk needed no torchlight. The following morning saw more increased bird activity, three or four skylarks were showing over Wood Field and the whole place was revving up for spring.

Hold on a minute, it's only February, and as with daffodils flowering in December, nature has got a bit ahead of the game.

On the farm though, we eagerly await the arrival of spring as this year we have a new flock of turkeys commencing to lay, and also a new member of staff to welcome. At last old Pete has retired and emigrated to New Zealand and, to tell the truth, he was a bit of a daisy. Some days he came to work and some days he didn't. YOU CAN'T KEEP WILLIE OF Worlingworth out of the news. On December 11th, he spotted a hoopoe in his drive, a rare event indeed.

Though very common in the warm, dry southern parts of Europe, it soon ruffled feathers in quiet old Suffolk and, when seen again in Southolt, the village became the twitchers' destination of choice. The hoopoe is actually more tame than many less exotic birds and this one spent a couple of days feeding on the local bowling green.

This spectacular bird confirms the trend to warmer winters as it is meant to overwinter in Africa. However, it is a much more welcome sign of warm winters than starting the lawn-mower on New Years' Eve, which I did this year for the first time ever.

The eye-catching hoopoe with an elegant bill is tougher than it looks as it can open a reinforced jaw deep in the ground to catch bugs and grubs as well as lizards. Though both adults have the same plumage, the local residents soon worked out that this was a male because a female would have asked the way and not got lost.

Mr Miller of Bush Green thinks the green-keeper of the bowls club should be worried. Can the damage to the perfect surface inflicted by the hoopoe be repaired in the spring? Recently, he recalls, strong-billed rooks threatened similar damage to Wortwell's bowlinggreen and had to be deterred by both fair means and foul. Continued page 4

Continued from page 3 THE GAME AND Wildlife Conservation Trust has a busy programme in February and offers wild bird recognition courses throughout East Anglia. The Suffolk course was headed by Tim Schofield, who first advised me on conservation in 2000 and is always worth listening to.

The birds to concern us most in the winter are the tits and finches and our challenge is to provide more seeds in late winter. The bills, or mandibles, of finches are adapted for seed husking, and when it comes to mandibulation, the cleverest of all are greenfinches. They can unpeel a poisonous yew berry skin like a tinopener to get at the kernel inside.

Sorting out the skylarks from the linnets from the meadow pipits was part of the subject matter and all this was training for the annual farm bird count, the farmers' equivalent of the Great Garden Birdwatch.

with words, describes his garden as a blizzard of birds, but the farm count we undertook was anything but. We were not helped by the damp windy weather and saw only Canada geese and fieldfare passing through with very few tits and finches. And no hoopoe.

THE DECLINE IN HOUSE

sparrow numbers has stopped and now we have more of them on our garden bird-feeders. They obviously enjoy getting their grit requirements from the soft brick and mortar of the old workshop wall.

■ EYE GRAMMAR SCHOOL FUND: The fund wants to give away some money ... If you're at school or a student aged 25 or under there may be things that you need for your studies but can't quite afford. The Eye Grammar School Fund is here to help! It's a Trust set up to provide grants of money to young people and educational organisations in the locality. Grants are not large – usually up to £200 – but they may make all the difference. The Trustees meet quarterly, usually in October, January, April and July to consider applications and award grants. Applications must come from students or organisations serving people under 25 who live in the parishes of Eye, Athelington, Bedfield or Horham. The grants are intended to help with expenses not provided for by the Local Education Authority. They might include the costs of purchasing books, clothing, tools and instruments, course fees for educational purposes, or preparation to enter a trade or occupation. For more information please contact the Clerk to the Trustees on 870170 or email sara.muldoon@icloud.com.

Splendid isolation does not seem a very realistic option

N CONVERSATION WITH friends about Europe I said "but we share a common culture with Europe" this was met with derision. I therefore started to wonder how to define culture, clearly the word means different things to different people.

It could refer to quite small attributes suggesting that people in Horham are of a different culture to those in Stradbroke or that Norfolk and Suffolk people have different cultures. We may argue with our neighbours about small things and valiantly try to win football matches but I think we know how we share more ways of living and thinking than we differ.

Alternatively culture could refer to much wider ways of looking at the world. As children, most of us are taught something about ancient Greek and Roman civilisations, we know that democracy was founded in Greece and that Romans instituted a legal framework. We know that Rome ruled not only ourselves but much of the continent as well. It is easy to ignore the fact that many Roman works remain in the form of roads, place names, various buildings and most important of all as the foundation of our own legal system. All this is true right across much of Europe.

As well as ancient common experiences we have on-going modern interests in common. We listen to music composed by people from across Europe. The Eurovision Song Contest may be a bit of a joke but we can relate to all the songs in a familiar way. However much we may like Asian, African or Chinese music we relate to it as something different, new, interesting but not familiar.

The same is true for art and literature, our galleries are largely full of European artists. We may enjoy and learn from those outside Europe but they need translation.

Maybe one day the whole world will be united into one culture but it is not there yet.

From the beginning of the European Union I have been irritated by the emphasis on money, business, jobs; all these are of great importance but are not, by themselves, a useful foundation for a relationship. In a globalized world, splendid isolation does not seem a realistic option, we are Europeans, geographically and culturally, we need to sort out the problems, not run from them.

Two rows of Beans in the

WO ROWS OF beans in Redlingfield churchyard. This is how Eddie Coe described the graves of the BEAN family when he asked me to see what I could find out about them. There are six gravestones – Thomas Bean, his two wives and three children from his first marriage.

THEODOSIA (first wife of Thomas) was the first to be buried. She died in 1830 aged only 31. She was the daughter of John and Elizabeth Pipe baptised in Horham on 23rd July 1799. She married Thomas, also in Horham on October 16th 1823. They had four children: Mary Ann born in Horham 1824 then Betsy 1827, Walter 1828 and Thomas 1830 all born in Redlingfield.

THOMAS born about 1799 (I am not sure where) lies beside Theodosia. He was a wheelwright and is named as the owner and occupier of a wheelwright's shop on the 1839 tithe apportionments for Redlingfield. It stood at the end of Low Road where the old school is now. There were two wheelwright's premises in the village at this time, the other owned and occupied by Robert Bolton was where Woodvale stands today. Thomas married Sarah Pipe in 1846. He died aged 50 in April 1849 in Redlingfield

WALTER, baptised Redlingfield January 1828, is buried beside his father. He too died in April 1849 aged 21 in Eye.

SARAH the second wife of Thomas died aged 76 in 1883. Her grave is next to Walter's. According to the 1851 Census she was born in Wilby about 1807. Her parents were Jerimiah and Sarah Pipe so she wasn't a sister of Theodosia – perhaps a cousin? She was in the house of Thomas Bean in 1841 as Sarah Pipe and there are two children, both Pipes. She was described as a spinster when she married Thomas in December 1846. Then in 1851 after the death of her husband she was the head of the household which included Thomas, son of Theodosia. There were four other children all with the surname Bean. Only the baptism of the last born has Thomas recorded as the father.

The others were recorded as the children of Sarah Pipe and were born before the marriage. The 1851 Census also notes that she was being kept by the parish. 1861 and 71 censuses show

churchyard

Sarah as a charwoman alone in the house in 1861; in 1871 she had two grandchildren with her. In 1881 she was "formerly charwoman" aged 74.

BETSY was baptised in September 1828. The 1851 Census tells us that she was housekeeper for her grandfather John Pipe in Horham, a retired farmer of 86. In 1861 she was a cook in Halesworth, 1871 a cook in Dedham and in 1881 housekeeper for her nephew Thomas Beecroft, an unmarried grocer in Eyke. She died in Eyke in March 1883.

THOMAS jnr. was born 1830 in Redlingfield but not baptised until 1832. He was a wheelwright aged 21 in 1851 living in his stepmother's house. By 1861 he had a wife, Emma and was a carpenter living in Eagle Street, Norwich.

He had moved to Diss by 1871 with Emma and two children and remained there through 1881 and 91 as a carpenter. In 1901 we find him a widower, retired carpenter, aged 71 and an inmate of Hartismere Workhouse in Eye, perhaps due to illness rather than poverty. He died on the 13th April 1902.

MARY ANN born 1824 also a child of Thomas and Theodosia is not buried with her parents but in Horham. She married Charles Beecroft in 1846. They ran the grocer's and Post Office in Horham. Mary Ann continued after Charles died in 1868 and was still there in 1891. She died in 1895.Linda Hudson

BROME RECYCLING CENTRE:

Brome Recycling Centre is currently closed for reorganisation. Mid Suffolk Council is looking into options for the future re-opening of the site. Until then, residents wishing to dispose of household waste and/or recyclables can take it to the free recycling centres at Stowmarket or at Morningthorpe (north of Long Stratton). See the new Village Directory for details. In the meantime people must not leave items in front of the closed gate as this would be considered fly-tipping, which carries substantial penalties. Mid Suffolk Council would liked to remind you there are a number of CCTV cameras operating in the area. David Burn

REDLINGFIELD PARISH MEETING:

Solutions to flooding in the village at Tudor Rose (Carousel as was) are being investigated with the help of the village committee. A new dog poo bin should soon be installed just inside the gate of the Doorstep Green. A defibrillator has been received and we plan to place it in the phonebox if we can reach an agreement with current charity which owns it. Otherwise the location will be on the Doorstep Green.

Janet Norman-Philips, Clerk ■ NEIGHBOURHOOD WATCH: Chris Gibbons would like to see if anyone else would like to take over the role of Neighbourhood Watch co-ordinator for Redlingfield so he is looking for a volunteer. ## Great start

E ARE NEARLY INTO the second half of Spring term already – time flies when you're having fun, which is certainly what children are doing at school!

It has been a great start to our new year at Wilby Primary School. All the hard work fundraising and support from our parents and community have enabled the enrichment of our outdoors learning space. All pupils will benefit from our new "trim-trail", which was installed at the end of January (see picture). We have all had a go on the trail, but are really looking forward to an improvement in the weather so we can explore, climb, work as a team, create, imagine and thoroughly enjoy our new outdoor play equipment.

We celebrated Pancake Day this week by having a pancake race (not on the trim trail), which proved to be lots of fun!

On Friday 29th January, children from Beech class were fortunate enough to see the Watoto Children's Choir at Stradbroke High School – a highly-talented and inspirational group of orphans from Uganda, which they thoroughly enjoyed!

We have many exciting things planned for the rest of this term too. Book Week starts on 29th February and World Book Day will be celebrated with a visit from author Peony Lewis and the 'Lion Learners' and their amazing animals. Pupils will get the opportunity to use their book tokens at the book fair held after school that week.

to the year

Years 2 to 4 will be going to Thorpe Woodlands in March. Set in the beautiful surroundings of Thetford Forest, Thorpe Woodlands Adventure Centre offers a range of adventurous and educational outdoor activities for primary school-aged children.

Music remains an important part of life at Wilby – Year 5 and 6 are preparing to take part in the Celebration of School's Music at Snape Maltings Concert Hall on 14th March along with six other schools. Historically, this has proved to be a fantastic event and we expect the same this year!

Oak Class are also out for a day in March, to see the Gruffalo's Child at the Norwich Playhouse theatre. This has fantastic reviews, so we know the children will have a great time and use it for learning when back at school.

'Tea and Toys' is a toddler group which is run at the School every Thursday morning, 9am-10.30am, in term-time. It is free and open to anyone with children aged up to five. Please come along and join in the fun

- you would be made most welcome!

If you have any queries regarding the school please contact the headteacher, Mrs Coleman, for more information on 384708.

■ NEW REEDING WOODS GROUP: The mature trees along Pound Lane present stark silhouettes against the steely winter sky, but at least the rain has stopped. In the woodland the grassy paths and rides are saturated and squelching noises accompany every step. The rain has filled the pond to an acceptable level, though the water looks muddy. The trees have grown tall over the last year, some now over eight feet in height, and many of the oaks still hold their leaves, brown and rustling in the cold wind that blows across the fields. No sign of life anywhere until you look closely, here there are still bright hips on the rambling roses, and shiny blackberries on the privet. Closer inspection reveals swelling buds on many of the trees and trailing catkins on the birches and hazels. The muddy trail of foot and paw prints indicate that, though silent on our visit, this is a well-used amenity, enjoyed by many in the villages of Denham, Horham and Athelington. This woodland is always open, child and dog friendly and flourishing. Visit it soon! Contact Mike Reeves on 01379 668 179 for more details.

PAUSE by Manday Miller
The village has a pause	Sun rises in a different spot but not at
Life has a pause, it ebbs and flows,	Christmas,
Wildlife divides up the garden – each having its own space,	The sun sails across the sky, the moon glides on by,
A day can last a lifetime a year can pass
quickly in a blink of an eye,	My village life has a pause all of its own, The seasons ebb and flow,
Yes, my village has a time of its own,	Each taking turns to delight and annoy.

Rev David Streeter

By David Green in the East Anglian Daily Times:

More than 200 people packed a village church for a service in memory of one of Suffolk's most colourful clerics.

Real David Streeter, former rector of Stradbroke, Horham, Athelington and Redlingfield, died in October last year at the age of 73 – three years after he retired following 50 years in the priesthood.

His widow, Margaret, said she was "amazed" by the number of people who had turned up for a memorial service held this week in Horham Church and conducted by lay elder, Laurence Weaver.

"We had to bring in many extra chairs and had people sitting in all areas of the church, including the porch," she said.

At the end of the service Mrs Streeter handed each member of the congregation a sprig of rosemary in remembrance of her husband.

Mr Streeter's younger brother, Paddy, said David had loved Stradbroke and the neighbouring villages and had a real bond with local people. They had regarded him with great warmth, he said.

"What is certain is that every one of us, as long as we live, will remember him as a fine, genuine Christian man. We are all the better for knowing him," he added.

Deeply compassionate but considered eccentric and sometimes awkward in manner, David Streeter was most widely known for his colourful clothing, his love of the Royal Family and his "dare-devil" exploits in abseiling down Stradbroke church tower to raise funds.

Educated at Harrow School, he went on to study at Pembroke College, Cambridge, and Queen's College Birmingham.

His first job as a clergyman was as curate at first Saffron Walden and then Shrub End, Colchester.

He was rector at Rayne in the Chelmsford Diocese from 1973 till 1979 and then vicar of Higham's Park, near Walthamstow, until 1982 when he moved to Stradbroke. He served as rural dean of Hoxne from 1991 to 2000.

During more than 30 years in Stradbroke he dabbled in amateur drama and was a great fan of Gilbert and Sullivan musicals.

There were sixteen members of David's family at the memorial service - including his three surviving brothers – John, Andy and Paddy. Nina Weaver played the organ, the Benefice choir sang an anthem and the congregation sang two harvest hymns (loudly). The ashes were interred by Rev Michael Womack in Horham Churchyard before the "do" at Horham Community Centre. A collection raised £634.45 in aid of St Elizabeth Hospice.

Excerpts from the eulogy by David's brother Paddy

David was born on 21st August 1942 ... There were three older trobuers, aged 7, 5 and 4. Our father, a farmer, besides running the farm and also rushing around making sure the neighbouring old-fashioned farmers were boosting production was on Command of the local Home Guard – indeed Dad's Army...

[At prep school David] ... was a scholar from the start and his great rival to be top of the form was Richard May, later the British Judge at the International War trials at The Hague. He made friends easily. He was always good at work, not so good at games ... in the 50s there was a terrible polio epidemic. David was about 10 when he went down with it, mercifully his attack was relatively mild, but things caught up with him later ...

The next stop was a Harrow Scholarship ... David got much out of Harrow, he made friends, – he acted as Quince in the Shakespeare plays where the sons of both Rex Harrison and Stanley Holloway were also in the cast. Although no athlete he manly played in the football and rugby games.

The next stop was Pembroke College, Cambridge. He enjoyed Pembroke more than anywhere else. He started as a classicist and then changed to theology. At Harrow it was clear that he was heading to the Church, although teaching was considered. He would have been a disastrous teacher.

He saved our parents quite a lot of money by winning a scholarship so they helped pay for a round-the-world trip ... He travelled from monastery to monastery. While on this trip he picked up malaria and one other more mysterious bug. These stayed with him for the rest of his life ... At the age of 25 he was ordained. He was appointed the curate at Saffron Walden, then he moved [to] Shrub End, Colchester.

David met Margaret while on holiday at Frinton. I'm not sure if David was a saint or not, but Margaret deserves a sainthood for putting up with him. What a marvellous wife to a challenging man. I won't list all his eccentricities. We would be here till midnight ...

I would like to touch on David's character:

His Mildness - David was like the dormouse in Alice in Wonderland. But he should never be underestimated. Charity - ... He set up a Charitable Settlement over 40 years ago. Courage -.... At the start of his training he had a terrible stutter but he overcame it. He took on youth work in Stradbroke, when virtually no other clergyman in Suffolk would touch it. He was contemptuous of current paranoia and innocently and obviously drove young people around from the youth club in his car ... Humour - David had a great sense of humour. I shall miss his hearty laugh. He was to write his memoirs. If he had the same retirement years that many of us will enjoy he may have done so ....

What a bond there was between David and Stradbroke, and Stradbroke and David. He loved the village and the neighbouring hamlets.

What is certain is that ever one of us, as long as we live, will remember him as a fine, genuine, Christian man. We are all the better for knowing him.

The trees say we're in for a

COOL BUT DRY AND quiet day towards the end of January – just right for pollarding the young ash trees along the boundary of my garden. I say they are young only because they are fairly small – up to the tops of their knobbly heads they are around two metres tall and the trunk of the largest is only about 30cm or a foot in circumference.

Their size belies their age. When we first came here to live they were mere saplings which I proceeded to thin out with the probable intention of getting rid of them altogether. That is until I saw an avenue of short pollarded trees leading up to a lovely Romanesque chapel high up in the Pyrenees and was so taken with them that I thought I would try my luck growing them at home. These same saplings are now trees and the pollarding keeps them ever young – could this be the reason that (so far) they show no signs of the dreaded ash die-back?

The shooting poles from the heads have a remarkable annual growth – as much as three to three and a half metres and when cut are useful around the garden as poles for plant supports or materials to make low hurdles which I have used as temporary wind breaks to protect young plants.

Despite the annual pruning the heads seem to get a little higher each year (or is it me getting shorter) so that now the time has come for more drastic measures and I have bravely decided not only to cut the poles off but also the heads. I shall leave the tops of the beheaded trees at about my own eyelevel. This tough, not to say merciless treatment won't harm the trees (fingers crossed) and should, if anything, prolong their life. Apparently ash trees live for about 150 years but, if pollarded regularly, can live for much longer.

Most hardwood/broadleaf trees can be successfully pollarded and traditionally have been. Commonly these have included willow, elm (when we had them) and oak. Locally, in Redlingfield there is a line of old pollarded oaks on the road leading out towards Wash Farm. In the past pollards were used to denote boundaries here in Britain as well as throughout the Low Countries. Germany and what are now called the Baltic States. They commonly appear in the landscape in Bruegel and Rembrandt which shows that they do go back a bit.

Apart from their use as boundary markers, poplars were not big favourites with Landlords as in Law the tenant could have the annual crop of shoots for his own use while the Landlord was left with the unproductive trunk or "bolling". In his book "The History of the Countryside", Oliver Rackham quotes Roger Harlackden lord of Earls Colne from 1611 "went to Samuell berners ground and ther we found 60 upright timbertrees at ye least yt had been girt (made into pollards) within 2 or 3 year all about 20 years growth some a fadem (6ft) about and many as big as a

soak again

mans middle". By 1615 he was so incensed by this sort of thing that he dispossessed a tenant "for cropping and girting 2 or 3 upright timber trees and selling the bollingers".

It is a pity that I won't be in a position to make any further use of my ash "crop" than already mentioned as the wood has a remarkable range of uses. It is very strong yet resilient and therefore ideal for its traditional employment as tool handles as well as for frames for carts and carriages; similar to the way in which it was used for the structural, external frame on that post-war favourite, the Morris Traveller. This car, I should explain for our younger listeners, was a doll's garage version of the much bigger, more ponderous, American station waggon in which, say, Katherine Hepburn would drive Spencer Tracy off to the train station of a morning. I always coveted one but could never afford it when they were around.

These same qualities of strength with resilience have been appreciated since ancient times. Ancient Roman infantrymen were issued each with two "pilums" (pilae?) in their kit which were ash poles which were driven into the ground to form, with others, a palisade wherever the legion set up camp. This is the wood that according to Homer, the invincible Achilles chose for his spears. Going back even further, to Nordic mythology the universe was supported, fed and watered by Yggdrasil, the tree of life or the world tree which was a giant ash tree under whose boughs the gods met.

At a more mundane level, but one which affects me directly, is the superiority of ash as a fuel for heating. There is a traditional rhyme which lists at some length the pros and cons of various woods for burning but finishes with what you might call a glowing endorsement for the ash tree.

But ash logs, all smooth and grey Burn them green or old; Buy up all that comes your way; They're worth their weight in gold. (No honestly I didn't make that up!). There is also much that could be said of the qualities of ash as effective folk medicine but let's end with this:-

Ash before oak; in for a soak, Oak before ash; in for a splash.

I don't think I have ever seen oak before ash; so I suppose that, once again we are in for a soak!

THE RECTOR REFLECTS ... EASTER ... IT'S A FIX!

THE ARCHBISHOP OF Canterbury is a skilled politician; not my opinion but that of a comment piece on The Guardian website after his recent gathering of Archbishops. I don't think it was meant to be taken as a compliment!

Justin Welby had assembled the Archbishops of the Anglican Community to discuss various things. Many predicted this would be the end of the worldwide Anglican community so the fact that he kept most of them in the room for most of the time (only one walk-out) is no doubt tribute to his political skills.

Perhaps not surprisingly, very little was actually agreed. Maybe hoping to distract attention from this, Welby announced that he was seeking agreement to fix the date of Easter. I'm sure he knows that legislation was passed to fix the date of Easter as the 2nd or 3rd Sunday in April way back in the 1930s. Nothing has happened since.

But the root of Easter is the Jewish festival of Passover, which in turn is determined by the phases of the moon. At a time when there is so much emphasis on inter-faith relations it seems a case of taking the eye off the ball for him to want to detach Christianity from its Jewish core.

But what of us who aren't that bothered by church politics, or even regard it as a distraction? For my part, I like Easter moving around, it helps me to remember that the divine has a habit of breaking through when it likes and can make any day magical; that we can't write God in the diary, This year is a leap year and includes that magical day- 29th February when tradition has it that women can propose, and that is a date that's fixed!

YOUR DISTRICT COUNCILLOR

2016-2017 IS SHAPING UP to be challenging. The Government requires every council to play its part in growth. This means more houses. Although we do need more homes of every kind we want to preserve what is best in our villages.

Growth can be good and exciting. New young people to revitalise our communities and support our local shops and businesses. With new homes comes better infrastructure.

I am keen that each village discusses their needs and possibilities and works with the planners, rather than wait to hear what they have in mind for us.

There will be plans for the villages to see and engage in later in the spring. Those plans will take account of the size of communities and their rural nature. You will hear the term "cluster", this means several small villages will be taken together with the largest and nearest community that has sustainable services.

We are proud of the rural nature of this part of Suffolk, it has long been so, and there are ways of growing to make it more alive and vital for the future without loosing what we live here for.

It is temping to look a year or so ahead but we must have a vision for Suffolk for more years than that. Sensitive planning in a measured way is what we are working for at Mid Suffolk. Adding better broadband and mobile phone signals is essential along with plans for water and sewerage improvement.

It is important we look at the bigger picture for Suffolk rather than isolating communities, I am available to answer questions, if needed, but at the moment we are waiting for draft plans so that we can all see what a bright future looks like.
